BALTIMORE SUN
3 February 1987Senate panel's legal staff

WASHINGTON — The Senate Iran-contra committee, known formally as the Select Committee on Secret Military Assistance to Iran and the Nicaraguan Opposition, has assembled a staff of seasoned legal and investigative experts to guide its inquiry in the next several months. The following are brief profiles of key committee staff members:

- ARTHUR L. LIMAN, chief counsel. Considered one of most prominent criminal law experts in the nation, he has represented well-known clients, including John Zaccaro, husband of former vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro; fugitive financier Robert Vesco; and Dennis Levine, the Wall Street trader cited in an insider trading scandal. He is the former chief counsel of the New York state commission that investigated the Attica prison uprising and a member of various state and legal advisory panels. A partner in the New York law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rinfkind, Wharton and Garrison since 1966, he has a reputation as a tough, aggressive legal adversary.
- PAUL BARBADORO, deputy chief counsel. A New Hampshire attorney with the firm of Orr & Reno in Concord and a former assistant state attorney general in criminal justice divisions. He is former legal counsel to Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the vice chairman of the investigative committee.
- MARK A. BELNICK, executive assistant to the chief counsel. A partner in Mr. Liman's New York law firm, he has extensive experience in civil and criminal cases.
- MARY JANE CHECCHI, executive director. Served as political consultant and staff director for Senate Democratic Policy Committee from 1975 to 1980.
- LANCE MORGAN, press secretary. Public relations consultant with Burson-Marsteller firm in Washington and former press secretary to Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y. He is a former reporter for U.S. and international newspapers.
- DAVID E. FAULKNER, investigator. A veteran FBI special agent since 1964, with extensive experience in white-collar crime, racketeering, covert operations and counterintelligence investigations. Mr. Faulkner was chief investigator for the FBI in the case against Ronald W. Pelton, who was convicted on conspiracy and espionage charges in U.S. District Court in Baltimore. A counterintelligence officer for the FBI with responsibility for defense contractor security in Maryland and Delaware, he worked for the Senate investigations subcommittee on labor during a union probe from 1981 to 1983.
- THOMAS POLGAR, investigator. A 34-year veteran of the CIA, he has won several decorations for valor and outstanding service. He was CIA station chief in Saigon from 1972 until the final U.S. pullout from Vietnam in 1975, when he supervised evacuation of Americans and left the U.S. embassy roof on the same helicopter as Ambassador Graham Martin. He retired from the CIA in 1981.
- CLARENCE H. ALBRIGHT JR., associate counsel. He is assistant U.S. attorney for the eastern district of Virginia.
- DANIEL P. FINN, associate counsel. Former chief counsel of Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.
- CAMERON H. HOLMES, associate counsel. Assistant attorney general for Arizona and former staff counsel to Arizona task force on organized crime.
- JAMES E. KAPLAN, associate counsel. Partner in Washington law firm of Shea & Gardner.
- CHARLES M. KERR, associate counsel. Administrative partner in the litigation division of the Baltimore law firm of Venable, Baetjer and Howard.
- JOEL S. LISKER, associate counsel. Formerly chief counsel of Senate subcommittee on security and terrorism, he is an official in Justice Department's internal security and foreign agents units.
- RICHARD D. PARRY, associate counsel. An associate with the Salt Lake City law firm of Hansen & Anderson.
- JOHN D. SAXON, associate counsel. Washington representative for General Electric Co. and former counsel for Senate Ethics Committee.
- TERRY A. SMILJANICH, associate counsel. A partner in the St. Petersburg, Fla., law firm of Blasingame, Forizs & Smiljanich.
- TIMOTHY C. WOODCOCK, associate counsel. Assistant U.S. attorney for Maine.
